This year, friends told us about the English Film Club, and we were very enthusiastic about it from the start!

Frank Mc Girr is a very experienced lecturer and has a knack for choosing films. On the one hand, the films are all classics that are definitely worth seeing (in the last course, films from 1950 to 2020), and on the other hand, he has a knack for selecting films that “non-native English speakers” can understand well.

A few days in advance, we receive our “homework”: film titles, links to the history of their creation, interviews with directors/actors, etc. In addition, several pages of very well-chosen vocabulary and idioms. If you go through these, the films (including English subtitles) are really easy to understand!

We didn't know a single film before, have seen great British and American films, and will definitely continue with this magnificent course
