Why should you go to the English Film Club

Understanding English and speaking freely and fluently has always been a challenge for me. I attended various English conversation courses, which were quite helpful, but I didn't enjoy much. That's why I was looking for a way to improve my English skills in a more enjoyable way. Since I like going to the cinema, I considered the English Film Club a good way to combine both.

The Film Club not only watches films, but also provides material in advance to prepare for the corresponding film: an excerpt from the essential dialogues as well as the repetition or introduction of vocabulary and idioms that you have to research independently. Links to some interviews with the filmmakers and actors also provide a better insight into the film. The discussion on film content on the basis of defined questions following the film screening trains free speaking. In addition, the content of the film is also dealt with.

After participating in the Film Club for about 10 years, my English vocabulary has expanded, my reading and listening comprehension and especially my ability to express myself in English has improved significantly. So is my pronunciation, since the films are cast by native speakers. In summary, the English Film Club is a perfect approach to the English language.
